

LOTUS PERRY SHORT BIO

Lo Sun 'Lotus' Perry (孫珞) is the lead instructor of Chinese Language and Culture in the Asian Studies Program at University of Puget Sound. A native from Taiwan, Perry received her B. A. in Western Languages and Literature from Tunghai University in Taichung, and her M. A. in Comparative Literature from University of Washington in Seattle. An advocate for innovative use of instructional technology, Perry integrates a variety of digital materials, mobile & online tools into her course design and daily teaching. She is the co-author of Taiwan Today (Cheng & Tsui Company, 3rd edition, 2009). Her website and course blog publish and archive teaching and learning resources available to all interested teachers, students and other learners. Perry is the faculty liaison on campus for the Puget Sound Taiwan Summer Program (1989-2019), working closely with majors and minors in the Asian Studies Program to advise students on study abroad and fellowship opportunities. She regularly organizes co-curricular events, including the annual Tacoma Moon Festival and the Empowering Asian American panel series. A founding teacher and key administrator, Perry led the charge to establish the Washington chapter of the Chinese Language Teachers Association (CLTA-WA) in 2009 and has been actively promoting quality Chinese instruction in the state of Washington. Perry have been a member on the City of Tacoma Taichung Sister City Committee, and currently serves as the Secretary and a Board Member for the nonprofit organization, the Chinese Reconciliation Project Foundation (CRPF). Perry shares her passion for tea and other cultural topics in her personal blog.
